Occupational Science Seminar

Transition is a word which means passing from one state to the next, focusing on transformation and transition periods in the life cycle. As we experience different events and life crises, we learn we can move through and overcome the crises and grow using the power of occupation. Within us we have the strength of occupation. Occupational therapists work with people in life crises because of disease, disability and aging, as well as other conditions, and help them to overcome their life crisis. How can we, occupational beings, promote transitions through life's crises?
